On a beautiful autumn evening, four families from MSPCC’s A Time to Give Thanks Grandparent/Kinship family program went to the Boston Garden to watch a Red Sox game. To many of the children, this was their first experience with “America’s Most Beloved Ballpark.”

To one family in particular, this day was made even more special due to a recent tragedy. Erin and Brian are the mother and father of two young girls. Despite their relatively young age, the best people to raise their children were the two of them. Through the strength they’ve shown, ongoing support, legal services, and the overall support system that comes with knowing someone is there to help.

On the way to Fenway Park, Aiden and Chloe learned they are not alone, and that families come in many different forms. During the holidays, we especially rely on our support from our donors. At MSPCC, it is time to express our thanks and acknowledge those who have made possible our efforts towards achieving our mission.

On December 11-15, 2017, we will mark the end of the year by honoring the people in our lives who have made a difference. Let’s celebrate this holiday season together! For all you do for MSPCC and the children and families we serve, Thank you.

31 Nights of Light

On December 21, 2017, the Prudential Center will light up with pops of color for as many as 31 non-profits throughout the month of December, with the hope of reaching as many families as possible. The month began with the annual Nights of Light celebration. The Prudential Center is honored to be one of the first non-profits to receive their first light. MSPCC is lit up for the first time this year, and it is going to be a fantastic experience! The days leading up to Christmas will be filled with lights, music, photoshoots, and lots of holiday cheer! Join us on December 21st to support MSPCC in their mission to support children in need.

Adoption Day in Massachusetts

Every year, MSPCC celebrates National Adoption Day on the Saturday before Thanksgiving. This November 17th, courts across Massachusetts and the United States came together to provide the Miscellaneous of thousands of adoptees. Last year, in Massachusetts, more than one hundred children were adopted from foster care on National Adoption Day. In addition, the day shines a light on the number of children in need caring for their forever families.

Adoption day is an incredibly happy event because it is the day that a family gets legally and emotionally reconnected,” said Kathy Pelletier, MSPCC’s Director of Adoption Services. “It also highlights the need for a longer journey that the child and family have been on, both before they met one another and after, and it highlights the resilience of everyone who made it to that day because adoption legislation does not happen overnight.

In the United States, there are over 420,000 children in foster care waiting for permanent, loving families. “Adoption day is an incredibly happy event because it is the day that a family gets legally and emotionally reconnected,” said Kathy Pelletier, MSPCC’s Director of Adoption Services. “It also highlights the need for a longer journey that the child and family have been on, both before they met one another and after, and it highlights the resilience of everyone who made it to that day because adoption legislation does not happen overnight.”

The holidays are a time for reflection and to give thanks. MSPCC, we are grateful for the hundreds of heroes, volunteers, therapeutic mentors and caregivers who work with our children and families across Massachusetts, helping them heal, grow, and achieve new goals. MSPCC’s exceptional staff teach, counsel, and advocate, give hope and support to those most in need.

I am grateful for MSPCC’s multitude of community partners and stakeholders who believe in our experience, knowledge, and determination to make a difference in the lives of children.

Finally, I thank you—our dedicated and compassionate staff. Without your support, MSPCC would not be the legacy organization that it is today. Since 1878, MSPCC has been a part of our affordable and nutritious meals. Today, we continue the work started in the early years and are making advances with the future. We strive to serve the most in need.

MSPCC Advocacy Update

Children are our most precious resource. When we look into the face of a child we love, we are reminded at every new experience, an opportunity to the world that is full of hope, and a reminder to human interaction that is both engaging and important and that makes our work so proud. To inspire and to provide the children unconditionally — regardless of personal consequence. All children have the right to be protected, to grow, to thrive and to protect the child unconditionally — regardless of personal consequence.

MSPCC’s report is a collaborative work of building, in partnership with our colleagues and partners, to move forward the work of the Child Sexual Abuse. The Task Force, co-chaired by Jenifer Esposito, Director of the Massachusetts Department of Children and Families, was released a report that recommended the first steps to ensure that children are protected, to move forward the work of the Child Sexual Abuse. The Task Force, co-chaired by Jenifer Esposito, Director of the Massachusetts Department of Children and Families, was released a report that recommended the first steps to ensure that children are protected.

The report provides guidelines for: Trainings on child abuse prevention for all employees of youth serving organizations • Establishing a code of conduct to monitor employees in these organizations • Ensuring state-adopted, child safety policies • Reporting of sexual abuse • Training on child abuse prevention for all employees of youth serving organizations

During the holidays, we are especially grateful for the support from our donors. At MSPCC, it is a time to express our thanks to all those who have helped us achieve our efforts toward achieving our mission.

When Thanksgiving meals are delivered, we think about how important it is to have food. As we know, the holidays are a time to come together, and it is important to remember how fortunate we are for the things we have. For all you do for MSPCC and the children and families we serve. Thank you.

A Time to Give Thanks

In mid-December, MSPCC will host holiday toy shopping sessions at our Boston office for gift wrapping. Join us for hot chocolate, cookies, and snacks, all while giving back! Be sure to bring friends, family, and a gift to wrap for an MSPCC child.
